

Health, Language, Religion, and Spirituality (HeaLRS) Scholar Community

The HeaLRS Scholar Community explores the multifaceted relationships among Health, Language, Religion, and Spirituality. Rooted in the Humanities in Health @ Pitt, this initiative brings together a diverse Community of Practice consisting of students, interns, staff, faculty, community members, and industry partners. This community addresses the often-overlooked intersections of social determinants of health and their influence on culturally and linguistically diverse populations. Students will learn to approach service and overall engagement with others with cultural humility, cross-cultural understanding, and compassion.
